

Massachusetts Congresswoman Ayanna Pressley tests positive for Coronavirus

Rep. Ayanna Pressley, of Massachusetts announced Friday that she has tested positive for COVID-19. Pressley, 47, is the second member of the Massachusetts congressional delegation to test positive for COVID-19, the first being U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren.

The Congresswoman who is fully vaccinated and boosted said she is only experiencing mild symptoms.

“Vaccines save lives. With this unprecedented pandemic continuing to rage, I am deeply grateful for the scientists, researchers, and frontline healthcare workers who have worked tirelessly to develop vaccines that are safe and effective, and ensure that our communities are protected.” said Pressley.

Pressley is in quarantine and following all health protocols in order to mitigate further spread and keep her loved ones and community safe.