

Massachusetts man, retired flight attendant, to push airplane cart from Boston to New York in tribute to 9/11

"Ok guys and gals, an amazing follow-up to the picture I posted yesterday of a guy pushing a cart around the park.

I was sitting down in the park and the same guy came by again. This time he's not getting by me until this nosey guy finds out what the heck this is all about.

This guy is a retired flight attendant and was working and just landed on his flight in Boston on 9-11. He knew a lot of the people who worked on the planes that went down. The cart is a beverage cart from an actual plane, and he is going to walk from Boston to New York at the 9-11 site pushing this thing all the way!!!!

He's been training for a while now, his name is Paul Veneto, he is from Milton, MA. He is starting his journey on September 1st with a goal of getting to New York on September 11th.

We talked for aw hile and he's a great guy. I'm making this public so hopefully, it will go viral and he gets a lot of attention. Good luck Paul!"-Billy Ryan.
