

Massachusetts man dives or falls off of bridge, dive team search underway

"Massachusetts crews are searching for a man that reportedly landed in frigid waters early this morning from a bridge.

According to Lieutenant Paul Sullivan of Massachusetts State Police, at 3:15 a.m. they received a report of a white male 29-30 years old either jumping or falling off the Larz Anderson Bridge into the Charles River.

According to the Cambridge Fire Department, the temperature was 22 degrees when they began the search.

Sullivan stated that their patrols, marine unit and dive team responded. Cambridge Fire dive team and Cambridge PD also responded.

As of now no person has been located."

All photos by the Cambridge Fire Department:

