

Massachusetts twin-engine plane crash claims lives of all aboard

A small plane crashed in Leyden, Massachusetts on Sunday morning killing all three passengers aboard the aircraft. The FAA confirmed that three adults were aboard a twin engine Beechcraft Baron 55 airplane which crashed at roughly 11:45am.

It is reported the aircraft crashed in a clearing on the side of a wooded mountain along the Greenfield-Leyden line.

The Federal Aviation Administration, National Transportation Safety Board, and Massachusetts Department of Transportation Aeronautics Division are assisting with an investigation into the cause of the crash.

The area where the plane crashed is pictured below.

Google photo.