

New Bedford business owner and police seek public's help in identifying suspect

"Posting here in the event someone might recognize this person. Two weeks ago today my small business was broken into in downtown New Bedford.

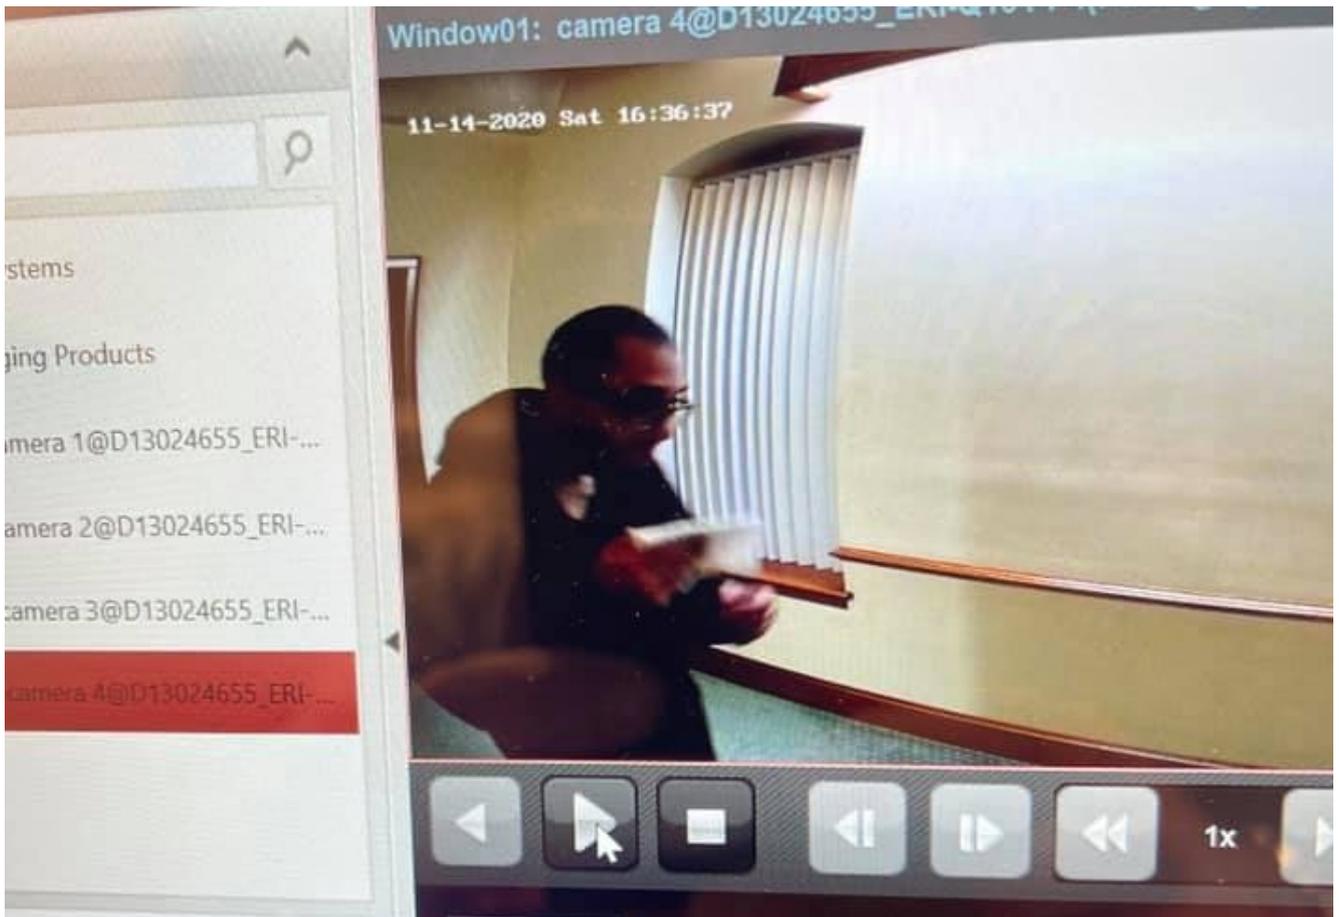

There are cameras in our building and I felt we got a pretty good shot of the guy, but there are no leads as of yet. My receptionist saw him briefly when he entered the building the first time. I did not see him; I only have the video footage. She described him as tall, late 20s/early 30s, dark hair, beard, and glasses. Our video showed him to have a blue cell phone case.

Yesterday, a young man entered my building in the same fashion and at the same times as the original break-in. Because I didn't see the first guy in person, I can't confirm that it was the same guy. However, the description is very similar, and his moves were the same. It also appears he has the same or similar glasses. The man I saw yesterday id describe as late 20s, tall, beard, and glasses. He wore a black sweatshirt, navy blue sneakers, and a mustard-colored beanie. It's apparent he attempted the same break in method as the man from two weeks ago but was unsuccessful yesterday due to more measures in place.

I feel uneasy as I search for answers as to why this man or men keep coming into my workplace. None of my staff recognized either man on either occasion and he's not believed to be associated with my business. This appears to be random, and I've learned I haven't been the only business targeted recently in the downtown New Bedford area.
