"I was at Market Basket in New Bedford and a man went into a seizure in one of the aisles, falling down, and knocking a bunch of stuff down.

This young nurse who was there shopping and saw it happen quickly shot into action without hesitation. She identified herself as a nurse, rolled the man over on his side, and supported him until medics and the New Bedford Police Department showed up.

A second shopper grabbed paper towels and helped support the man. Great/heroic stuff from this young female nurse who probably helped save this man's life or definitely was at least there for comfort and help the situation.
