

New Bedford Schools to Celebrate International Walk & Bike to School Day

On Wednesday, October 8, 2014, students at elementary schools throughout New Bedford including the Ellen R. Hathaway, Horatio Kempton, John A. Parker, Renaissance Community School for the Arts, Betsy B. Winslow Elementary Schools and Roosevelt Middle School among others, will celebrate annual "International Walk/Bike to School Day (I-Walk)." The celebration is aimed at encouraging students across Massachusetts to walk or bike to school as well as to raise public awareness about the importance of safe roads and environments that allow students to travel to and from school safely.

Students at several New Bedford Elementary Schools will walk and bike to school along with parents, teachers and community leaders. The spotlight school for the 2014 Annual I-Walk will be the Ellen R. Hathaway Elementary School, located on Court Street, across from Harrington Park.

Beginning at 7:45 A.M. on Wednesday, October 8, 2014 kids, parents and community leaders including Mayor Jon Mitchell will gather at Harrington Park to perform a series of exercises before walking and biking together to Hathaway School.

“Walk and Bike to School Day events like the one held today raise awareness of the need to support safer routes for walking and bicycling in our community,” said Mayor Mitchell.

“Walk and Bike to School Day also emphasize the importance of issues such as increasing physical activity among children, pedestrian safety, traffic congestion and concern for the environment. These events help build connections between families, schools and the broader community,” he continued.

I-Walk is a collaboration of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health’s Mass in Motion Program and the Massachusetts Department of Transportation’s Safe Routes to School Program, which is federally funded by the Federal Highway Division. The program is designed to create safer streets, promote physical activity, and build sustainable environments in over 170 communities throughout Massachusetts. Mass in Motion works with communities across the Commonwealth to promote healthy eating and active living for youth and adults.

“Events such as these highlight the importance of daily physical activity and how children will actually perform better and be more engaged in learning. But it’s more than just these bi-annual events, it’s also about schools finding ways to incorporate exercise, such as walking schools buses, a means for children to get moving in the morning in a safe and supervised way, throughout the school year,” said Mass in Motion New Bedford’s Coordinator, Kim Ferreira.

“When children walk or bike to school they get a great form of exercise first thing in the morning, so they arrive energetic and ready to learn. It's best if kids can get at least an hour of physical activity a day, so walking to school starts them out on the right foot," she continued.

"Even if you're not participating in the event today, if you drive by any school on your way to work in the morning, it's important to remember to slow down and be vigilant. The other half of the equation is promoting safe driving, as well," says Ferreira.

The Safe Routes to School campaign works with cities and other organizations to build infrastructure such as bike paths and sidewalks, and to deliver education and awareness to drivers about driving without distractions, slowing down, and respecting pedestrians and cyclists.
