

All UMass Campuses Moving to Remote Learning Through April 3

By Matt Murphy

State House News Service

More than 74,000 University of Massachusetts students will be required to take all of their classes online beginning as soon as Thursday as the state's largest public university system transitions fully to remote learning in response to the coronavirus outbreak.

The University of Massachusetts on Wednesday become the latest higher education institution in the state to make the decision to cancel on-campus classes following Gov. Charlie Baker's declaration of a state of emergency.

Other private institutions moving to online learning to help control the spread of the virus include Harvard, MIT, Northeastern, Amherst, Smith, Emerson and Boston University. The transition on UMass's five campuses, officials hope, will only be temporary as leadership plans to reassess the public health situation by the end of the month.

"It's a complex, fast evolving challenge and we felt this morning that we had to be proactive and that we had an obligation to do our part to try to mitigate the spread of the virus in Massachusetts," UMass President Marty Meehan said in an interview.

Meehan sent a memo to the Board of Trustees on Wednesday morning outlining the decision he had made in consultation with board Chairman Robert Manning. Meehan said he also spoke with Gov. Charlie Baker, House Speaker Robert DeLeo and Senate President Karen Spilka, and all agreed it was the right thing to do.

Online learning on all campuses will last through April 3, according to the university, and Meehan plans to reassess the public health situation by April 1 to decide whether that period should be extended.

"We are committed to ensuring to the best of our ability the progression of our students toward their degrees," Meehan said.

UMass Amherst and UMass Boston will begin remote learning on March 23 after spring break, while students on the Lowell campus will begin next Wednesday after they return from their break.

UMass Dartmouth, which is on spring break this week, plans to extend the vacation another week and begin remote learning on March 23, and UMass Medical students will begin online classes on Thursday.

Baker on Tuesday said he was aware that UMass and other state universities were discussing the possibility of canceling in-person classes, but did not think a decision had been made.

"That's obviously very disruptive," Baker said.

Meehan said that each campus will do its best to minimize disruption to students' degree progress, and make accommodations for students, including international students, who would have nowhere to go if they were forced to leave campus.

"The campuses are not being closed. International students who can't leave will stay in the residence halls and food service will be open to them. Each chancellor will be managing their campus according to their individual needs," Meehan said.

While most students are being asked to stay away from campus and dorms and to take whatever books and computers they will need to conduct their coursework remotely, Meehan said students are not being asked to move out of campus housing, as they have been at many other colleges. He also said it was too soon to begin discussing possible rebates for housing and meal plans if students are not permitted to return.

"In a perfect world, on April 1 we would be telling everyone to come back," Meehan said.

In a separate email to his campus, UMass Amherst Chancellor Kumble Subbaswamy said all students should remain away from campus "until further notice," but said exceptions will be made for students in "special circumstances." Students enrolled in certain laboratory, studio or capstone course may also be told separately to continue reporting to class on campus.

While the first known case of COVID-19 in Massachusetts was a UMass Boston student who had traveled to China, Meehan and Subbaswamy said there have been no cases reported in Amherst, or on any of the other campuses.

Public health officials said Tuesday that the Boston student was still in quarantine, but recovering well. That student, whose case was announced Feb. 1, has been in quarantine for longer than many other cases.

The university also said it had adopted Gov. Baker's recommendations for executive branch state employees and restricting work-related foreign and domestic travel, and discouraging employees from personal international travel.

Conferences, seminars and other large gatherings should also be canceled or held virtually, Meehan advised in his letter to trustees, and workers at high-risk should explore opportunities to work from home.

While Gov. Baker suggested on Tuesday that large public gatherings are "probably not a great idea," a quarterfinal playoff hockey match up this weekend between UMass Amherst and Northeastern is still scheduled to take place with fans in attendance.

Meehan said that many Division III athletic events on the Boston and Dartmouth campuses have been canceled, but the university continues to consult with Hockey East about future Division I contests. UMass and Northeastern plan to drop the puck at the Mullins Center in Amherst on Friday and Saturday, with a third game scheduled for Sunday if necessary.

"They will go along with whatever Hockey East decides to do, although I'm sure Northeastern would love us to forfeit the game," Meehan said.

With Emergency Declaration, Massachusetts Adopts New Coronavirus Strategy

By Matt Murphy and Colin A. Young
State House News Service

With the number of cases of coronavirus more than doubling from the day before, Gov. Charlie Baker declared a state of emergency Tuesday and imposed broad restrictions on travel for many state employees as Massachusetts moved into a new phase of its response to the global viral outbreak.

Baker had been in Utah on vacation since Friday night, but opted to return to Massachusetts a couple days early as the situation on the ground worsened and the number of coronavirus cases climbed to 92, up from 41 just a day before.

Seventy of those cases, public officials said, were linked to a leadership meeting of Biogen employees in Boston in late February, but additional cases, including a handful in the Berkshires, had no known origin and are being treated as the first evidence of “community spread.”

Massachusetts Public Health statistics as of 10 March.

Baker’s declaration of a state of emergency puts Massachusetts in the company of neighboring states like Connecticut, New York and Rhode Island, where those state governors have already taken a similar step.

The escalation of the state’s response came as a wide array of private institutions began limiting large gatherings and canceling conferences and non-essential travel, and the city of Boston canceled its upcoming St. Patrick’s Day parade and the political breakfast on Sunday.

“There’s no question that the efforts to mitigate the spread of this virus will be disruptive,” Baker said, later adding, “I want to be clear that state government will continue to operate uninterrupted.”

Baker said the declaration would give his administration more “flexibility” to respond to the outbreak, including ordering the cancellation of large events or accessing buildings to store protective equipment for first responders.

Under his order, executive branch employees will be restricted from traveling out of state for work, and the administration is encouraging employees to postpone personal international travel. He also said state workers should, if possible, work from home, and asked private employers to follow suit whenever possible. The restrictions will be revisited in 30 days, or sooner if the situation allows, Baker said.

“We are at a critical point in this outbreak. We’re making specific recommendations that will have a big impact on limiting the spread of disease in our communities. These measures are based on the evidence and facts that we know about this disease and in consultation with the CDC,” said Department of Public Health Commissioner Monica Bharel. “We will need everybody’s cooperation and assistance. We understand that these actions may have a significant impact on the lives of our residents.”

Baker said he was advising older residents and those with underlying health issues to avoid large crowds, including concert venues, conferences and sporting events, though he said he was not prepared to ask schools or professional leagues to cancel their events. He said there was still time for the Boston Athletic Association to make a call on the marathon in April.

“We think large gatherings are probably not a great idea,” Baker said.

Secretary of Health and Human Services Marylou Sudders said there were 51 new presumptive positives cases to report Tuesday. About three-quarters of the total cases – 70 of the 92 – have connections to the Biogen conference in Boston last month which has been linked to dozens of infections, Sudders said, and four were directly related to international travel. The remaining 18 cases are “under investigation because they’re newly reported,” she said.

Fifty-two of the patients are men and 40 are women. Six of the patients are hospitalized.

Middlesex County has the greatest number of presumptive cases, 41, followed by 22 in Norfolk County, 20 in Suffolk County, seven in Berkshire County, and one each in Essex and Worcester counties.

The seven cases in Berkshire County seem to be most concerning to state public health officials because they cannot link all of those cases to recent international travel or to isolated and known chains of transmission.

“Here in Massachusetts, person to person transmission of the virus in the community is beginning to occur among individuals without identifiable risk factors,” Bharel said. “As community transmission of COVID-19 becomes more common, the public health approach shifts to one of mitigation and that is reducing the impact.”

At one point during Tuesday’s press conference, Baker referred to “the Berkshire issue” as one of the reasons, along with the increase to 92 total cases, that he “would have to say the risk is increased.” Previously, the governor and other state officials had said the coronavirus risk in Massachusetts was “low.”

Bharel said DPH is assisting local officials in the Berkshires by facilitating the surveillance and testing of health care workers and patients and is in contact multiple times a day with the local authorities. DPH has also dispatched a public health expert to be on the ground in the Berkshires to assist.

The public health commissioner also announced Tuesday that the state’s request last week for personal protective gear from the stash maintained by the Strategic National Stockpile had been granted.

She said DPH specifically asked for stores of face masks, gowns, gloves and eye protection from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, and the gear is expected to arrive “shortly.” Some of it will be immediately sent to Berkshire County.

Health care providers currently have enough equipment, but the stockpile delivery will be needed to meet expected demand, Bharel said. She said the lab was running 24 hours a day and had “adequate supplies and adequate staffing” to meet demand at this time. The current turnaround time for tests is 24 to 48 hours, and the state just received another 2,000 testing kits.

The commissioner also said Massachusetts received a key approval to automate part of the coronavirus testing protocol that will increase the State Laboratory's capacity to test patients from 50 per day to 200. Bharel said the state has tested roughly 400 people since it began testing a little more than two weeks ago.

Sudders said DPH on Wednesday also will update the guidance it issued to nursing homes on Feb. 27 and will then hold a call with nursing and rest home operators to discuss the details before it is implemented statewide.

"Specifically, nursing homes will be directed to actively screen and restrict access to visitors to ensure the safety and health of residents and staff. No visitor access for anyone who displays signs or symptoms of a respiratory infection, such as fever, cough, shortness of breath or sore throat, or in the last 14 days has had contact with someone with a confirmed diagnosis of COVID-19 or is an individual who is under active investigation for COVID-19," the secretary said.

She added, "We will also be asking rest home operators and nursing homes to confirm that their employees are not sick, they've not had travel, they've not had close proximity to sick persons, to a sick person with under investigation for COVID-19 for 14 days."

People who have traveled outside the United States in the last 14 days or who live "in a community where community-based spread of COVID-19 is occurring" will also be barred from visiting nursing homes, Sudders said. Exceptions will be made for people in end-of-life or hospice care, she said.

To give local school districts the flexibility to make decisions about temporary coronavirus-related closures, Baker said the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education is going to give school systems “relief from attendance and school year requirements.”

He said no school will be required to stay in session for the school year beyond its scheduled 185th day of classes and that DESE will calculate chronic absenteeism at schools – part of the state’s usual accountability measures – as of Monday, March 2 so as to not count absences for the remainder of the year against a school.

Baker thanked the Legislature for its commitment to pass a $15 million coronavirus aid bill next week, and said he anticipated that a large portion of the money would be directed into communities for first responders. A Senate official said the funding bill will be flexible for the administration and DPH to use as it sees fit.

Harvard University and Amherst College were among a number of higher education institutions that said Tuesday they were canceling class for the rest of the semester and transitioning to online learning for students to finish their course work.

But when asked if the University of Massachusetts or other state universities and community colleges should take similar precautions, Baker said that was the subject of ongoing discussions on the campuses.

“That’s obviously very disruptive,” Baker said.

Some of what the administration was recommending was already being adopted in the private sector.

The Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce announced within about 15 minutes of the governor’s press conference Tuesday that “effective immediately through Friday, May 1, 2020, in-person Chamber programs and events will be rescheduled, include a virtual option, or be only virtual.”

Massachusetts High Technology Council President Chris Anderson said he has spent the past several days seeking guidance from member companies about what they're doing to protect the health and safety of employees.

Anderson said, in an email, that consistent with the input he received the council will postpone all events expected to attract 25 or more attendees through April, including its March 26 Women in Leadership Initiative Roundtable and the council's inaugural MATTERS Growth and Competitiveness Conference on April 7.

The Massachusetts Democratic Party said that based on the afternoon updates from public health officials it was temporarily postponing party caucuses, which have been taking place on weekends to elect delegates to the Democratic Party Convention in Lowell in May and have been an early battleground for the Ed Markey and Joseph Kennedy III Senate campaigns.

Joe Biden Upsets Elizabeth Warren in 2020 Massachusetts Primary Battle

Riding a new surge of support after his blowout South Carolina victory over the weekend, Joe Biden has stunned Elizabeth Warren on her home turf where she will have to settle for a distant third. Bernie Sanders, who held a rally in the state over the weekend and had pulled ahead in a recent poll will finish a solid second place. In the last three days several candidates withdrew from the race and endorsed Biden which has vaulted him as the main moderate left in the race.

Questions will circle the Warren camp as she evaluates her path after this evening. With 86% of the vote counted as of the publishing of this article its likely that turnout will exceed the 2016 numbers on the Democratic side. Incumbent Donald Trump won the Republican primary with 87% of the vote over former Governor William Weld.

Candidate Votes Counted as of 1:00 a.m. 86% Reporting

Biden 401,346

Sanders 320,064

Warren 246,309

Bloomberg 140,761
Buttigieg 32,107
Klobuchar 14,216
Gabbard 9,117
Steyer 5,834

Massachusetts State Police take polar plunge to raise money for Special Olympics

This weekend Lieutenant Robert Clements and Captain Leonard Coppenrath of the Massachusetts State Police joined officers from Hingham, Pembroke, and Hanover Police Departments to take a freezing dip for a great cause at the Nantasket Beach Polar Plunge in Hull.

Together they raised a combined amount of over $4,000 and earned the “Top Law Enforcement Team” award. The Nantasket Beach Polar Plunge as a whole raised more than $125,000. All of the funds raised will directly benefit the Special Olympics of Massachusetts!

Also in attendance was Senator Patrick O’Connor, representing Plymouth and Norfolk Districts.

New Bedford man who Allegedly threatened prosecutor held for dangerousness hearing

A 24-year-old New Bedford man who is alleged to have threatened violence and intimidated a New Bedford District Court prosecutor last week was apprehended this weekend and was detained yesterday pending the results of an upcoming dangerousness hearing.

Jonathan Perez-Martinez was arrested by Massachusetts State Police Troopers on Saturday and charged with witness intimidation and threats. A dangerousness hearing is scheduled to occur on February 25 in New Bedford District Court.

On February 12, while in Courtroom 3, the defendant was sitting in the audience waiting for a case involving his brother to be heard by the court when he is alleged to have told a prosecutor, "I'm going to f*ck you up." When the prosecutor turned around, the defendant is alleged to have said, "Yeah, I'm talking to you...I'm going to f*ck you up." The defendant then immediately left the courtroom.

Shortly thereafter, the prosecutor exited the courtroom, walked through the lobby and entered into the screening area where he was about to leave the courthouse. However, a court officer who witnessed the incident inside the courtroom, stopped the prosecutor and advised him to wait until the defendant had left the property before exiting the building. At that point, the prosecutor looked outside and observed the defendant flipping him off with his middle finger.

A State Trooper who was inside the courthouse at the time, took a report of the incident from the victim and also spoke with a court officer and probation officer who witnessed the incident. A warrant for the defendant's arrest was issued on Friday and the defendant was apprehended hiding behind a bedroom door at a friend's apartment on Myrtle Street on Saturday afternoon.

"Threatening a prosecutor or any court official in open court is outrageous. On top of it, the defendant was waiting for the prosecutor outside when the court proceedings concluded. I will not tolerate this type of lawlessness and contempt for the judicial system. Our office will make every attempt to hold this defendant accountable," Bristol County District Attorney Thomas M. Quinn III said.

Massachusetts stands to lose up to $2.4 billion per year with proposed Medicaid rule change

By Matt Murphy of State House News Service

Governors around the country, including Gov. Charlie Baker, are fighting the Trump administration over proposed changes to how the federal government reimburses states for Medicaid, seeking to avoid a shift that could blow a massive hole into state budgets.

The new regulations proposed by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services could jeopardize some of the financing arrangements Massachusetts uses to pay for its $16.7 billion MassHealth program, according to the Baker administration and various state health care groups.

Nursing care facilities, particularly those located within continuing care retirement communities, could be especially hard hit.

A summary document put together by the Executive Office of Health and Human Services and shared with the News Service estimates that Massachusetts could lose between $365 million to $2.4 billion per year in federal revenue if the rule were to go into effect. The public comment period on the rules ended on Feb. 1.

The Baker administration says the rule would probably lead to “the restructuring or elimination of existing health care related taxes” and require the negotiation of new waivers that the state uses to advance new care delivery strategies and supplement payments for certain services.

Baker told the News Service this week that while in Washington, D.C. over the weekend for the National Governors Association meetings he and other governors “spent a ton of time talking about health care, especially about Medicaid and, sort of, the future of the program.”

The gathering in Washington came a week after Baker and Oregon Gov. Kate Brown wrote to the Trump administration on behalf of the National Governors Association warning that the rule could “significantly curtail the longstanding flexibility states have to fund and pay for services in their Medicaid programs.”

“We understand that CMS desires more oversight. However, the (rule) makes broad changes that could prohibit or limit many permissible financing and supplemental payment arrangements in Medicaid programs across the states,” Baker and Brown wrote.

CMS Administrator Seema Verma in November proposed the rule, known as the Medicaid Fiscal Accountability Regulation, as a way to ensure that supplemental payments and financing arrangements are fairly administered.

“We have seen a proliferation of payment arrangements that mask or circumvent the rules where shady recycling schemes drive up taxpayer costs and pervert the system,” Verma said in a statement.

CMS said that the national Medicaid program had grown from from $456 billion in 2013 to an estimated $576 billion in 2016, with a disproportionate share of the growth falling on the federal government, whose share climbed to $363 billion.

Supplemental payments – those given to providers in addition to the base payment for individual services – have also been growing from 9.4 percent of all other payments in fiscal 2010 to 17.5 percent in fiscal 2017.

Assistant Secretary for MassHealth Daniel Tsai said Massachusetts supports the goals of transparency and accountability but said the new regulation, as proposed, would be an “unprecedented federal overreach.”

Tsai, in public comments submitted to CMS, urged Verma to withdraw the rule, calling it “ambiguous,” “poorly defined,” and one that would put “arbitrary limits on common financing arrangements.”

In particular, Tsai said that by limiting intergovernmental transfers to revenue derived from state or local taxes, the administration would be prohibiting states from using other “legitimate” sources of funding, including bonds, lottery funds, and public college tuition, to cover its share of Medicaid costs.

The rule, the Baker administration said, could also force the state to segregate all federal revenue from its general fund in order to ensure that none of it is appropriated to MassHealth during the annual budget process.

“The ambiguous and inconsistent nature of the rule creates significant uncertainty for states and would impose severe limitations on states' flexibility to channel funding toward new policy and delivery system reforms," Tsai wrote.

The sentiments expressed by the Baker administration have been echoed from leaders – both Democrats and Republicans – in states from California to Illinois. Florida Medicaid Director Beth Kidder said the impact of the rule in the Sunshine State would be “immediate and crippling.”

Attorney General Maura Healey joined six attorneys general to write a letter opposing the rule, while the Massachusetts Medicaid Society joined sister organizations from around the country to submit testimony raising concerns about projected impacts on state finances and the ability to deliver care to low-income patients.

Boston Medical Center President Kate Walsh said it was “unrealistic” to think that states would be able to continue with existing supplemental payments to safety-net providers like BMC if existing revenue streams like intergovernmental transfers and provider donations were no longer allowed.

“These reforms would place an exceedingly high and disproportionate financial burden on safety-net providers – legitimately putting BMC and many others at risk of failing to continue to operate – with dire consequences for low-income patients and their ability to access timely, quality health care services,” Walsh wrote.

The public comment period was extended by 15 days in December, and ended on Feb. 1.

MassHealth is the state's $16.7 billion Medicaid program, which provides health insurance coverage for 1.8 million residents, including 40 percent of all children and 60 percent of all residents with disabilities.

The federal government reimburses Massachusetts for about half the cost of the program, sending back more than $8.3 billion a year to pay for care.

Marie Barney, the director of quality at Rivercrest, 42-bed skilled nursing center in Concord, said nursing facilities in Massachusetts derive 61 percent of their income from Medicaid, making them particularly vulnerable to changes in funding.

Barney, in comments to CMS, said Massachusetts is one of 18 states that has provider taxes on nursing facilities, assessing a nursing home bed tax on patients that pay for their own care to help cover the state's cost for patients on Medicaid. The state, however, exempts those within continuing care retirement communities because they have been shown to reduce MassHealth utilization.

Barney said the fiscal accountability rule could force Massachusetts to end its exemption for retirement communities, eliminating $250,000 from Rivercrest's $5.8 million annual revenue stream.

"Given that revenue currently does not cover the cost of the care provided, this would be an extreme burden which would likely need to be passed on to the elderly residents of the CCRC," Barney wrote to CMS.

Massachusetts Health and Hospital Association President Steve Walsh said the rule would have "unquestionable devastating effects" on patients and providers, and also called on CMS to withdraw the regulation.

The American Hospital Association estimated the nationwide financial impact on hospitals and other Medicaid providers to be between $37 billion and $49 billion.

"Funding reductions of this size will not only affect specific provider payment arrangements, but also the bottom-line of state Medicaid programs and their ability to maintain support of the program generally," Walsh said in his testimony to CMS.

Walsh said the rule would threaten MassHealth's accountable care organization program, which is entering its third year with 17 ACOs serving 900,000 patients. He said it would also "dampen the economic contributions" of hospitals and providers more broadly, hurting a major employment sector in Massachusetts.

Walsh said that if CMS were to require intergovernmental transfers to be derived from state or local taxes, Massachusetts may have to reduce payments to safety net providers, increase state and local taxes or divert funding away from other state priorities.

Brand Ambassador (Sales Associate) – American Eagle Outfitters (Dartmouth)

YOUR ROLE

As a part-time Brand Ambassador, you bring our brand to life every day! Your goal is to provide everyone who comes in the store with an amazing shopping experience, making their day better than before they came in. You are the face of our company and you're proud of it! You love the products and are passionate about building brand loyalty with every guest. Most of all, you represent our company values and bring your REAL self to work every day.

YOUR RESPONSIBILITIES

- You're a people person! You use the AEO Selling Model to engage with every guest to help them find exactly what they're looking for, and you do so with a "friends first" mindset. (What's the AEO Selling Model? Don't worry – we'll teach you everything you need to know!)
- You're passionate about AE & Aerie product! Guests come to you to educate them on product details and you are excited to make product suggestions to fit their needs.
- You share the brand love! You're eager to introduce the AEO loyalty program and additional brand channels to guests.
- You can hang! Your skillset rocks no matter what zone you're in and you can easily flex between the Salesfloor, Cash & Wrap, • Fitting Room and Stockroom as needed.
- You're an innovative problem solver! Making your guests' day is your priority and you're able to proactively resolve guest concerns while sticking to company policy.

- You're a team player – #teamwork! You're always willing to assist your team in #gettingthejobdone.
- You've got integrity! You do the right thing and you always adhere to AEO's policies & procedures.

YOU'D BE GREAT FOR THIS ROLE IF:

- You love interacting with people!
- You're full of energy and can handle multiple tasks in a fast-paced environment.
- You're available to work when guests shop (lookin' at your evenings, weekends & holidays!)
- You love AE and Aerie products.
- You've worked in retail before. #practicemakesperfect
- You're at least 16 years of age.

OUR BRAND AMBASSADORS LOVE AEO BECAUSE:

- They work with REAL people – there's nothing like your #AEOfamily.
- They're given opportunities for development, the chance to learn new skills, and are offered great potential for career advancement.
- They receive 40% off product at both AE & Aerie year-round (plus additional seasonal discounts with new Floorsets!)
- They participate in store contests for the chance to win FREE merchandise and other exclusive prizes.
